A Funny Thing Happened On The Way To Becoming A Papa

I love being a husband, dad, and family man. We have had many terrific family adventures that I would love to share with you.

We were indeed a magical family in many ways. We did a full illusion program that entertained thousands of people over the years. I hope you smile as you read these stories. I am sure I will introduce my family in these stories because they were all real characters in their own right and perhaps a future book. I hope people see in me a Christ follower, fun, loving, generous, and difference maker. Enjoy my story.

The Night She Bugged Me

We had settled in for a good night's sleep after a very busy day in our brand new home near Ocala, Florida. It was perfect. The love of my life was lying close enough to me that I could feel the warmth of her body. It felt good, as the air conditioner had cooled our new home to a perfect temperature.

I had pulled the covers down to my waist and was not wearing a shirt. I was wearing some gym shorts and I believe she had on some shorty pajamas. I just know she looked good as I closed my eyes for the night.

Suddenly it felt like my wife Dottie, used her fingers to walk across my bare chest. She went from one side to the other and it woke me up. I sat up a little bit and turned toward her and we both asked at the same time, "What are you doing?" I said, "What do you mean, what am I doing? You used your fingers to walk across my chest." She said, "No I didn't. You did that to me."

We turned on the light and saw a big black palmetto bug running across the sheet down the blanket and onto the floor. It was difficult but we caught up with that big flying roach and took him out. We decided to sleep with a night light on from that point until this very day.

The only time I ever felt her fingers going across my chest from that day on, was really her fingers and the same for her. I call this the night she bugged me but it brings a smile to my face as I think about all the fun we have shared over the fifty years we have been married.
