A Funny Thing Happened On the Way to Being A Papa

I love being a husband, dad, and family man. We have had many terrific family adventures that I would love to share with you.

We were indeed a magical family in many ways. We did a full illusion program that entertained thousands of people over the years. I hope you smile as you read these stories. I am sure I will introduce my family in these stories because they were all real characters in their own right and perhaps a future book. I hope people see in me a Christ follower, fun, loving, generous, and difference maker. Enjoy my story.

Tan or Dirt?

Do you remember when photographers used to set up in department stores and take pictures? You could get an 8 by 10 for just 99 cents. They would advertise the photo shoots in the department store advertisements and in the newspaper. We loved taking our children for 99 cents pictures.

Dottie would clean the girls up. She would pick out the most gorgeous little dress, put pretty stuff in their hair and make sure they posed beautifully for the photographer. We did this quite often.

Dottie was gone with our eldest daughter, Leona. I was home enjoying the day with our youngest daughter Lynnette. She was outside playing in the dirt most of the day. Little Lynnette and I came in the house for a snack and I noticed an ad for 99 cent pictures at a department store close to us. I put Lynnette in the car and we were off for pictures. She had a dirty yellow sun-suit on but I thought she looked cute.

We arrived at the store, and the line was not long. Within minutes, it was time for Lynnette to get her picture taken. I thought she looked cute enough for a picture, but when I told Dottie what I had done, she chewed me out. She was not happy. She thought that I should have cleaned her up, changed her clothes and made her look like a little beauty. My wife was very upset at me.

However, when we picked up our 99 cent picture a few days later, the picture quickly became my favorite little girl picture of our youngest daughter, Lynnette. Oh yea, Dottie liked it too. What do you think?
